During a 12 week long, 600+ hour course, I developed, tested, and deployed four applications, each in five-day sprints.

- Tic Tac Toe: Built front-end project using HTML, CSS, JavaScript, jQuery, and AJAX, creating game logic and win conditions from scratch, before testing, deploying, and presenting project
- downTime: Built first full-stack application using Bootstrap, Ruby on Rails, and Handlebars, in addition to the skills used above, and deployed it using both Heroku and GitHub; app allows users to record, track, and visualize time spent away from their screens
- Nozama: e-commerce site built as part of a four-person team, using Express, Mongoose, MongoDB, and Stripe; worked closely with more senior developers to pair program and create data visualization and pop-ups
- KindPath: Full-stack capstone project application using Ruby on Rails, Handlebars, and the Ember.js front-end framework. It is a dynamic to-do list that allows users to sort their to-dos based on their energy levels and how crucial the to-do item is
